Adapted Arts and Crafts

- Art activities can be very unstructured, the sky is the limit!!
- Don’t be too interested in an end product, it’s the fun in creating that is so important.
- Create an environment that encourages exploration, creativity, and positive self esteem.
- Use a wide range of materials. Paint with brushes, sponges, rollers, combs, fingers, feet, spray bottles, toothbrushes, forks, blot with towels, and other creative items.
- Find ways to make art projects more accessible for individuals. For example, clamp paper onto the table or wheelchair tray to prevent sliding. Use easels for projects; determine a degree to tilt them which is easy for the individual to reach.
- Art experiences can encourage fine motor skills, eye-hand coordination, and problem solving skills. In addition, language skills can be further developed. Talk about different textures, examine how things feel, how they look, and what you can do with them.
- The following are arts and craft supplies and kits that have been found to be more easily accessible for children with disabilities. Many of the items have larger knobs, spill-proof features, easy to grasp handles, and enlarged features. We have also listed the necessary information you will need to contact the companies where supplies can be purchased. Consider calling to get a copy of their latest catalog. The following is only a sampling of the many arts and crafts materials available not an endorsement.
